The Human Rights Act continues to have a profound impact on the UK legal landscape. Policy-makers, practitioners and academics need an opportunity to review the latest developments in law and practice and to consider the challenges that lie ahead. The Annual JUSTICE/Sweet & Maxwell Human Rights Law conference has established itself as the premier forum for examining case law and legislative developments across a broad range of practice areas.

The conference brings together the country's leading experts in human rights law. Plenary sessions will consider UK law in the context of changing circumstances internationally and political pressures at home. Specialist interactive workshops will allow in-depth analysis and discussion, covering:

- Asylum
- Criminal law
- Discrimination and employment
- Judicial review
