Introduction

1. The present document is submitted by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights defenders, Margaret Sekagya, to the Human Rights Council, pursuant to resolution 16/5 of the Human Rights Council. The document provides observations on the communications on specific cases addressed by the Special Rapporteur to States, as well as observations on the replies received from States.

2. The cases raised by the Special Rapporteur in this addendum include communications sent between 1 December 2012 and 30 November 2013.

3. The addendum contains observations on the communications and responses received from States until 31 January 2014. A small number of replies received before 31 January 2014 could not be included because translation of these documents was not available at the time of finalising the report. Most of the responses by States refer to cases raised by the Special Rapporteur during the period December 2012 to November 2013. However, responses received during the reporting period to cases addressed by her in earlier reporting period have also been included. These communications are marked with a footnote in the text.

4. For ease of reference, cases have been grouped by country, with countries listed alphabetically according to their names in English. Each communication is referenced in one of six categories: urgent appeal (UA), allegation letter (AL), other letter (OL), joint urgent appeal (JUA), joint allegation letter (JAL) and joint other letter (JOL). This is followed by the date the communication was issued, as well as the case number and the date of the State's reply. The electronic version of the present document has both of these items hyperlinked, and clicking on them will open the communication sent and the reply from the concerned State, respectively, as uploaded on the OHCHR website. Finally, in bold, is a short reference to the allegations contained in the communication in the language of submission.

5. The Special Rapporteur is grateful to all States which have transmitted substantive responses to her communications. She considers response to her communications as an important part of cooperation by States with her mandate. She trusts that States who have not provided substantive responses to her communications will do so shortly.

Toutefois, elle regrette l'absence des réponses aux trois autres communications envoyées durant la période couverte par le présent rapport.

Observations

29. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the replies transmitted to five of her six communications sent during the reporting period and welcomes this improvement in the response rate since the last reporting period when one response was received to four communications.⁴

30. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express her deep concern about what she considers undue restrictions imposed on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and association. Individual human rights defenders have been arrested, while organisations have been impeded in their work to promote human rights by means of changes in legislation which have unduly curtailed basic freedoms.

31. Specifically, following the amendments made to the Law on Freedom of Assembly, the Administrative Offences Code and the Criminal Code in December 2012, peaceful gatherings can now be criminalised when it “causes the significant violation of the rights and legal interests of citizens” (art. 169, para. 1 of the Criminal Code). According to the Government’s response, gatherings “propagandizing national, racial or religious discord” can constitute an “abuse” of the right to freedom of peaceful assembly. The Special Rapporteur expresses her concern about what she considers the shrinking of the space for the peaceful promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms in Azerbaijan.

32. The Special Rapporteur is also concerned that the legislative amendments to the Code of Administrative Offences, the law “On non-governmental organizations” and the law “On grants” could be used to hinder the work of non-governmental organisations (NGOs) in Azerbaijan. These amendments have increased the penalties in cases where organisations do not register with the Ministry of Justice and have defined what constitutes a “donation” for the purposes of grants legislation. Therefore, only those organisations whose causes are approved by the Government via registration are legally entitled to receive funds for their cause. The Special Rapporteur believes that this constitutes an undue restriction to the right to associate freely, which further narrows the space for peaceful and independent work by human rights defenders.

33. The Special Rapporteur, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on freedom of opinion and expression and the Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of association and peaceful assembly, issued a press statement on 4 October 2013⁵ about the importance of the work of human rights defenders and civil society organisations in the run-up to the Presidential elections in Azerbaijan, which took place on 9 October 2013.

34. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her availability to provide guidance and support to the Government of Azerbaijan in any issue related to the establishment and consolidation of a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders, including through a conducive legal, institutional and administrative framework. She reiterates her interest in visiting the country and regrets that to date her request to conduct such a visit (2013) has not received an answer.

Observations

42. The Special Rapporteur would like to thank the Kingdom of Bahrain for the responses received to the seven communications sent during the reporting period. However, she expresses her concern with regards to the volume of the allegations received and the severity of the issues raised therein.

43. The Special Rapporteur expresses concern with regards to the draft law on Civil Associations and Organisations which imposes restrictions on associations, including a prior approval procedure to set up an association; extensive discretion to the authorities to monitor and influence the internal affairs of an association; and prior ministerial approval with regards to funding. Although the Special Rapporteur appreciates the response provided by the Government which indicated that NGOs had been consulted with regards to the contents of the draft law, she firmly believes that undue restrictions should not be imposed so as to prevent associations from operating freely.

44. The Special Rapporteur also expresses her concern with regard to the recommendations adopted on 28 July 2013 to amend the Law no. 58 (Protecting Society from Terrorists Act) of 2006. The Special Rapporteur appreciates the detailed response provided by the Government on 4 September 2013, but she remains concerned that this law could impose restrictions on human rights defenders' ability to effectively carry out their legitimate and peaceful human rights activities.

45. The Special Rapporteur further wishes to express concern with regards to information she has received of intimidation, arrests, detention, ill-treatment, torture and enforced disappearances of human rights defenders. Furthermore, she is concerned about information she has received regarding the treatment and conditions in detention, including physical abuse, isolation and refusal of access to family members and legal representatives.

46. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the investigations on cases that she has raised in a number of communications regarding allegations of torture in detention, including forensic examinations. Although the Government refutes these allegations, the Special Rapporteur remains concerned about the high volume of allegations received regarding the situation of defenders in the country, who remain at risk of arbitrary detention and ill-treatment as a result of their legitimate and peaceful activities. The Special Rapporteur urges the Government of Bahrain to take immediate steps to ensure human rights defenders are able to carry out their work in an effective manner without fear of such violations.

47. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her request (2012) to visit the Kingdom of Bahrain to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observations

54. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the acknowledgement of receipt to five out of six of the communications sent during the reporting period. She trusts that substantive responses will be provided shortly to all of these communications.
55. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern of reports received of violent physical attacks and attempted murder of human rights defenders in Bangladesh. She also expresses her concern regarding allegations of excessive use of force by law enforcement authorities to disperse peaceful demonstrations, which in some cases led to casualties and severe injuries amongst demonstrators. The Special Rapporteur urges the Government of Bangladesh to take immediate steps to ensure human rights defenders are able to carry out their work in a safe and enabling environment and that their physical and psychological integrity is guaranteed. The Special Rapporteur is also concerned about reports of searches at the premises of NGOs and seizure of laptops by security forces and the subsequent arrest and detention of NGO staff members and refusal of access to a lawyer.
56. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her concerns regarding the passing by Parliament on 19 August 2013 of the amended Information and Communication Technology Act of 2006, which she believes imposes undue restrictions on the right to freedom of opinion and expression.
57. The Special Rapporteur regrets that to date no reply has been received in response to her request (2013) for a country visit to Bangladesh to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Belarus

58. JAL 19/02/2013 Case no: BLR 1/2013 State reply: none to date
Alleged arrest of, and imposition of fines on three human rights defenders.
59. JAL 28/03/2013 Case no: BLR 2/2013 State reply: none to date
Allegations of confirmed forced cessation of a human rights organization's activities in appeal.

Observations

60. The Special Rapporteur regrets the lack of response to the two communications sent during the present reporting period. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned at reports received indicating that there is an increasingly restrictive environment for human rights defenders in Belarus, including the use of judicial and administrative provisions against certain organisations and journalists working on human rights issues.

61. This restrictive context for human rights defenders is highlighted by the Special Rapporteur on the situation in Belarus, when he warns against the use of arbitrary administrative and criminal detention as a means to intimidate, harass and punish individuals engaged in undesired activities, including human rights defenders, journalists and lawyers⁶. Moreover, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of Belarus expressed his concern about the imprisonment of human rights defenders and activists based on spurious criminal charges and unfair procedures, aggravated by allegations of torture and ill-treatment while in custody, as part of a strategy aimed at “breaking” them into admission of guilt.⁷

62. The Special Rapporteur finds the forced cessation of the activities of the organisation “Platforma” – which was the object of a previous communication (BLR 4/2012)⁸ – and the subsequent confirmation at appeal in November 2012- of particular concern.

63. The Special Rapporteur would like to express serious concern at the alleged emergence of a pattern of legal and administrative harassment, and stigmatisation of human rights defenders expressing opinions online. In this connection, the alleged extension of the notion of “mass disturbance” so as to include online postings determines retrospectively what qualifies as a “mass disturbance” under Article 23.34 of the Belarusian Administrative Code. In her view, this unduly restricts the space in which human rights defenders operate and can be used to curtail basic public freedoms.

64. The Special Rapporteur reiterates her availability to provide advice to the Government, in particular concerning the establishment of a safe and enabling environment for the defence and promotion of human rights, and trusts that the Government will respond favourably to her repeated requests to visit the country (2010, 2011).

66. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time of finalising this report, she had not received a response to the communication sent during the reporting period. She trusts that she will receive a substantive reply to the allegations presented about an attack and death threats against a LGBT defender and impunity for such attack.

Botswana

67. JAL 08/07/2013 Case no: BWA 2/2013 State reply: 10/07/2013

Alleged arbitrary denial to register a human rights association.

Observations

68. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for acknowledging receipt of the communication sent during the reporting period. She trusts that she will receive a substantive reply to the allegations presented regarding the arbitrary denial to register LEGABIBO, a human rights organisation that aims to promote non-discrimination and uphold the human rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex people. She takes note of the information received in the acknowledgment of receipt regarding the intention expressed by the Minister of Defence, Justice and Security at the UPR of Botswana in June 2013 to engage further with the founders of LEGABIBO.

69. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned that the denial to register LEGABIBO might be related to the association's peaceful activities in defending the human rights of LGBTI individuals in Botswana. She would like to reiterate the importance of ensuring that the right to freedom of opinion and expression and to peaceful assembly is guaranteed without discrimination of any sort.

Alleged death threats and false allegations of paedophilia and sexual abuse against LGBT rights defenders in Brazil.

Observations

75. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the reply received to one of the communications sent during the reporting period but regrets that, at the time of finalising the report, five communications remained without reponse. While recognising the steps taken by the Government to improve the protection of human rights defenders, outlined in the Government's response dated 16 September 2013, she urges the Government of Brazil to conduct prompt and thorough investigations in each case, prosecute the perpetrators, and provide adequate reparation to victims. She trusts that a response to the other communications will be provided shortly.

76. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned regarding the information received about the excessive force used to disperse protests during the mass demonstrations of June 2013, including the use of tear gas and rubber bullets. This was the subject of a communication sent in June 2013 jointly with other experts of the Human Rights Council. She looks forward to receiving a response to what she considers to be very serious allegations.

77. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express her deep concern about the reported continuous climate of violence and pressure – involving killing, harassment, intimidation and criminalisation – experienced by organisations, social movements and indigenous communities defending environmental and land-related rights. The Special Rapporteur expresses serious concern concerning the death threats and harassment targeting those working to end discrimination against the LGBTI community in Brazil, as mentioned in the communication dated 7 November 2013. She expresses further concern at the escalating violence against journalists investigating corruption by public officials and the police, such as that mentioned in the communication dated 6 December 2012.

Observations

79. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time of finalising the report, no response had been received to the communication sent during the reporting period. She remains gravely concerned regarding the information she has received of excessive force used to disperse peaceful protests. She would like to express her concern regarding the physical and psychological integrity of those exercising or seeking to exercise their rights of opinion and expression and of peaceful assembly and association in Cambodia. In this regard, she would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

80. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her request for a country visit to Cambodia (2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observations

84. La Rapporteuse spéciale remercie le Gouvernement des informations fournies en réponse à sa lettre du 4 janvier 2013. Elle regrette cependant, au moment de la finalisation du présent rapport, l'absence de réponse aux deux autres communications envoyées pendant la période couverte par le présent rapport.

85. La Rapporteuse spéciale exprime de sérieuses préoccupations par rapport à des informations reçues concernant des meurtres, tortures, tentatives de meurtre, actes d'intimidation, arrestations arbitraires et harcèlements judiciaires à l'encontre des défenseurs des droits de l'homme. La Rapporteuse Spéciale reste très préoccupée quant à la vie et intégrité physique et psychologique des défenseurs des droits de l'homme au Cameroun, surtout celles et ceux qui sont engagés dans la protection des droits des personnes lesbiennes, gais, bisexuelles, transgenres et intersexuées.

86. La Rapporteuse spéciale exprime ses préoccupations concernant des rapports reçus sur des actes de représailles à l'encontre des défenseurs des droits de l'homme. the Government for the substantive response received to the communication sent during the previous reporting period (CAN 1/2012).¹¹

91. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the information received regarding relevant protection and remedies in Canadian Law as well as the views of the Government on the allegations regarding the communication on Ms. Blackstock, dated 7 November 2013. The Special Rapporteur notes with concern the findings of the Office of the Privacy Commissioner of Canada, which considered the allegations made that officials from the Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada (AANDC) and the Department of Justice repeatedly accessed and monitored Ms. Blackstock's social media feeds to be "well-founded". She takes note that the AANDC accepted this finding and that it is complying with the recommendations made by the Office of the Privacy Commissioner. She looks forward to receiving information once the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal (CHRT) reaches a decision regarding the retaliation proceedings linked to the case.

92. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the information provided by the Government regarding the students' demonstrations in connection to the legal developments concerning the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association. She is pleased to note that the Quebec government which was elected in September 2012 decided to repeal the mentioned laws. The Special Rapporteur takes note that investigations are ongoing regarding allegations of excessive use of force by the police during the demonstrations.

Alleged arbitrary detention and deprivation of medical treatment of human rights defender, Ms Cao Shunli.

Observations

108. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the Government's responses to nine of her twelve communications sent during the reporting period, and hopes to receive substantive responses to the remaining communications.

109. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern at reports that she has received of excessive use of force against peaceful Tibetan student protestors and the subsequent detention and sentencing of these human rights defenders under charges of "illegally holding demonstration" and "causing harm to social stability".

110. Furthermore, the Special Rapporteur is deeply concerned about the arrest, detention and intimidation of human rights defenders in China for peacefully claiming their legitimate right to be part of the Universal Periodic Review process, as mentioned in communications dated 17 July, 1 October and 14 November 2013. She is particularly concerned about the enforced disappearance, and subsequent arbitrary detention of Ms. Cao

Shunli, and the alleged denial of medical treatment while in detention. The Special Rapporteur has voiced concerns about Ms Shunli, who is a prominent human rights defender, in a public statement issued jointly on 16 October 2013 with the Special Rapporteur on freedom of opinion and expression and the Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association.¹² She would like to reiterate her concerns that the high-profile nature of this case may deter human rights defenders from carrying out their peaceful and legitimate work, both in the exercise of their right to peaceful assembly and in their endeavours to co-operate with the United Nations human rights mechanisms. In this regard, she strongly urges the Government of China to ensure that human rights defenders can carry out their legitimate activities in a safe and an enabling environment; this includes through open and unhindered access to international human rights bodies such as the United Nations, its mechanisms and representatives in the field of human rights, without fear of harassment, stigmatisation or criminalisation of any kind.¹³

111. The Special Rapporteur is concerned over the allegations of members of the New Citizens Movement being targeted in connection to their peaceful and legitimate work promoting human rights and fundamental freedoms, mainly exposing alleged corruption amongst public officials and advocating for democracy. She would like to reiterate her concerns that the series of arrests of these human rights defenders reveal little room for dissenting voices in China and are a worrisome sign of an escalating crackdown on the rights to freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly.

112. Finally, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her concerns regarding the physical and psychological integrity of human rights defenders in China, following reports of human rights defenders being arrested, detained, disappeared, denied access to lawyers, denied medical attention and ill-treated in detention.

113. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her request to visit China (2008, 2010) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observaciones

124. La Relatora Especial agradece al Gobierno las respuestas recibidas a siete de sus diez comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe, así como por la información proporcionada sobre el apoyo y protección ofrecida a los defensores y defensoras. La Relatora confía que el Gobierno dará respuesta a las tres comunicaciones del periodo que aún no han sido respondidas así como a las cuatro comunicaciones que no obtuvieron respuesta durante el periodo anterior (COL 1/2012, COL 3/2012, COL 10/2012 y COL 11/2012).¹⁴

125. La Relatora Especial continúa preocupada por la situación de los defensores en el país, quienes siguen sufriendo actos de acoso e intimidación; amenazas, incluidas de muerte; ataques; y asesinatos por su trabajo en defensa de los derechos humanos. La Relatora Especial quiere llamar la atención sobre la difícil situación de los defensores y defensoras que trabajan en temas relacionados con la restitución de tierras, pueblos y comunidades indígenas, sindicalistas, abogados y periodistas. Asimismo, los riesgos que las mujeres defensoras enfrentan en el país preocupa a la Relatora, en especial aquéllas que trabajan en el norte del país y por el esclarecimiento de desapariciones forzadas y violaciones cometidas por las fuerzas del orden y grupos armados. La gravedad de los casos que han llegado a la Relatora es una muestra de la situación de inseguridad extrema que enfrentan los defensores y defensoras en Colombia.

126. La Relatora Especial quiere reiterar su profunda preocupación sobre un patrón identificado de actos intimidatorios, amenazas y asesinatos contra defensores trabajando sobre el proceso de justicia y verdad, por el esclarecimiento de violaciones cometidas por las fuerzas del orden y grupos armados, y contra la impunidad. Específicamente, defensores y defensoras que trabajan sobre desapariciones forzadas y casos de “falsos positivos” enfrentan un nivel altísimo de amenazas, intimidación y hostigamiento.

127. Asimismo, la Relatora Especial continúa preocupada por el grado de impunidad que prevalece en torno a los ataques y violaciones contra los y las defensoras en Colombia y querría subrayar la importancia de que se lleven a cabo investigaciones prontas e imparciales, que los responsables sean traducidos en justicia y que las víctimas reciban una reparación adecuada.

128. La Relatora toma nota de las informaciones proporcionadas respecto al balance realizado en abril de 2013 y la nueva fase del Proceso Nacional de Garantías para la labor de las y los defensores de derechos humanos, la cual tendría como objetivo reforzar su eficacia y lograr su descentralización. En este sentido, la Relatora agradece la información acerca de la asesoría y asistencia técnica que las autoridades centrales brindan a las entidades territoriales a través de los Planes Integrales de Prevención y Protección. Asimismo, la Relatora toma nota del establecimiento de un espacio técnico de protección y otro de investigación con el objetivo de formular recomendaciones de políticas y/o estrategias de lucha contra la impunidad.

134. La Relatora agradece las respuestas recibidas a todas las comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe y toma nota de la información detallada respecto al tratamiento médico proporcionado a la Sra. Yris Tamara Pérez Aguilera. Sin embargo, la Relatora lamenta que, en el momento de la finalización de este informe, no se haya recibido respuesta a la comunicación enviada durante el periodo anterior, con fecha de 23 de noviembre de 2012.¹⁷

135. La Relatora se muestra preocupada por las alegaciones recibidas durante el periodo del presente informe indicando la existencia de actos de intimidación y represalias contra defensoras de derechos humanos por su cooperación con el Comité de Naciones Unidas para la Discriminación contra la Mujer durante la 55 sesión del mismo. Si bien toma nota de la respuesta del Gobierno a su comunicación al respecto, la Relatora querría subrayar la resolución 22/6, adoptada el 21 de marzo del 2013 por el Consejo de Derechos Humanos, la cual reafirma inequívocamente el derecho o de toda persona, individual o colectivamente, “al libre acceso y a la comunicación con los órganos internacionales, en particular las Naciones Unidas, sus representantes y sus mecanismos en la esfera de los derechos humanos, entre ellos el Consejo de Derechos Humanos, sus procedimientos especiales, el mecanismo del examen periódico universal y los órganos de tratados, así como los mecanismos regionales de derechos humanos”.¹⁸

136. La Relatora reitera su preocupación sobre el difícil contexto que se da en el país para los que intentan ejercer el derecho a la libertad de opinión y expresión, de reunión pacífica y libre asociación, en particular para las y los defensores de derechos humanos los cuales son detenidos arbitrariamente antes, durante y después de participar en manifestaciones. La Relatora señala que el ejercicio de estos derechos básicos es fundamental para que las y los defensores puedan llevar a cabo su legítimo trabajo.

137. La Relatora se muestra asimismo preocupada por las alegaciones recibidas indicando la existencia de un patrón de actos de intimidación y acoso a defensores y defensoras de derechos humanos en sus propias casas, lo cual se conoce como acto de La Relatora toma nota de la respuesta del Gobierno a su comunicación sobre este asunto y se pone a su disposición para asesorarle acerca de las medidas necesarias para establecer y consolidar un entorno seguro y propicio para que los defensores y defensoras puedan llevar a cabo su trabajo, incluyendo un marco legal, institucional y administrativo favorable.

Observations

152. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government of Egypt for providing detailed responses to her communication sent on 20 March 2013 regarding a draft law on civil society organisations and her communication sent on 30 August 2013 regarding alleged violence and intimidation against journalists. The Special Rapporteur regrets that no reply has been received from the Government to any of the six other communications sent during the reporting period, particularly due to the serious allegations that were raised therein. However, she thanks the Government for the response received to the communication sent during the previous reporting period (dated 19 January 2012)²⁰.

153. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express her deep concern regarding excessive use of force by the police against peaceful demonstrators and human rights defenders, including women and children. She is particularly concerned regarding reports that she has received of killings, serious injuries, acts of torture and sexual harassment of demonstrators. She also expresses her concern regarding the apparent lack of intervention of the police and security agents to protect demonstrators. She expresses her sincere hope that these cases will be duly investigated, that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the victims will obtain adequate redress.

154. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned about violence and intimidation, arbitrary arrests and judicial harassment against journalists and media workers in relation to their peaceful and legitimate work in denouncing human rights violations. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

155. The Special Rapporteur further wishes to express concern regarding undue restrictions of the peaceful work carried out by civil society organisations and the intimidation of these organisations. She expresses particular concern regarding the sentencing of 43 NGO workers and the closure of the offices of a number of international organisations in Egypt by the Cairo Criminal Court, as mentioned in the communication dated 20 June 2013.

156. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate the concerns that she voiced in a joint press release published on 28 March 2013 regarding the proposed draft law on civil society organisations and that the provisions contained therein may be used to hamper the legitimate work of civil society organisations.²¹ However, she welcomes the intention communicated by the Government to continue to consult with relevant expert bodies and agencies regarding the draft law and to provide updates on the status of the national debate on this issue.

157. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her multiple requests to visit Egypt (2008, 2010, 2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observaciones

159. La Relatora Especial agradece la respuesta detallada del Gobierno a la comunicación enviada durante el periodo del presente informe. La Relatora toma nota de la acción del Estado respecto a las medidas cautelares otorgadas por la Comisión Interamericana de Derechos Humanos a la organización Pro-Búsqueda y agradece la información proporcionada acerca de las investigaciones en curso y las medidas de protección adoptadas. Asimismo, la Relatora considera positivo que diferentes instancias estatales emitieran de forma inmediata comunicados públicos de condena del ataque violento contra la sede de la organización y de apoyo a su trabajo.

161. JAL 16/07/2013 Case no: GMB 1/2013 State reply: none to date

Alleged lack of compliance of the amended Information and Communication Act with international human rights law.

Observations

162. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the acknowledgement of receipt for the communication sent on 18 December 2012. However, she regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, no substantive responses had been transmitted to the two communications sent during the reporting period.

163. The Special Rapporteur expresses her concern regarding the reports that she has received of alleged arbitrary detention of a human rights defender in an unknown location, including the denial of access to legal representation and family members. According to the information received, the individual was released after five months.

164. The Special Rapporteur also expresses her concern regarding the amendment to the Information and Communication Act by the Gambian National Assembly in June 2013. The Amended Act allegedly imposes maximum 15-year imprisonment and a fine of up to approximately 82,000 USD if found guilty of writing or spreading false information online including cartoons or satirical comedies. The Special Rapporteur is further concerned that this Act could be part of a broader campaign aiming to silence dissenting voices expressing critical views about public policy and issues of public interest, which she believes could hamper the work of those who defend and promote human rights.

Observations

166. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time finalising this report, there had been no response to the communication sent during the reporting period. While taking note of the public statements made by relevant authorities in relation to the incidents that took place during the demonstration on 17 May 2013, the Special Rapporteur trusts that a response will be provided shortly given the concerns expressed regarding the lack of sufficient and effective protection afforded to LGBTI defenders trying to exercise their legitimate right to freedom of opinion and expression through a peaceful demonstration.

Observations

168. The Special Rapporteur would like to thank the Government for the response provided to the communication sent during the reporting period. She takes note of the indications that the relevant judgments by the European Court of Human Rights, which found violation of article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights, are pending due to procedural reasons and the fact that the mentioned organisations are able to carry out their activities despite the fact that they are not formally registered. However, the Special Rapporteur urges the Government to expedite the implementation of such decisions so that the right to associate freely is not unduly restricted. She would also like to underline that NGOs and associations should be allowed to exist and carry out activities without having to register if they so wish.²²

²³ Although this communication was sent before the reporting period, a reply was received during the period covered by this report.

Observaciones

177. La Relatora Especial agradece las respuestas recibidas a dos de las siete comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe. Asimismo, agradece la respuesta recibida a su comunicación enviada con fecha de 30 de noviembre de 2012 (GTM 8/2012)²⁴ recibida el 26 de marzo de 2013. En especial, la Relatora agradece la información detallada acerca de las medidas de protección adoptadas por parte de las autoridades pero toma nota con preocupación del descenso en el número de respuestas recibidas, en el momento de finalizar el presente informe, en comparación con el periodo del anterior informe.²⁵

178. La Relatora Especial reitera su preocupación por el grado de violencia y los graves ataques que sufren los defensores y defensoras de derechos humanos en Guatemala, en particular por los asesinatos y ataques a su integridad física. La Relatora confía en que las investigaciones en curso se completen de forma pronta y adecuada de cara a esclarecer los hechos, depurar responsabilidades y llevar a los culpables de la violencia ante la justicia.

179. La Relatora señala con preocupación el alto grado de riesgo al que se enfrentan los abogados, jueces y otros sujetos procesales; los defensores y defensoras que trabajan por los derechos de los pueblos indígenas y campesinos; los que trabajan en defensa de los derechos medioambientales y el acceso a la tierra a menudo en el contexto de las operaciones de industrias energéticas y extractivas; y los periodistas. En este contexto, la Relatora querría reiterar que la protesta social pacífica es, además de un derecho fundamental, un elemento esencial en sociedades democráticas y participativas, y que cualquier restricción del mismo debe ser sujeta al más estricto escrutinio, respetando los principios básicos de legalidad, necesidad y proporcionalidad.

180. Durante el presente periodo de informe, la Relatora publicó junto con otros titulares de mandatos dos comunicados de prensa acerca del proceso de reconciliación y justicia en el país.²⁶ La Relatora Especial se muestra especialmente preocupada por las amenazas, campañas de descrédito e intimidaciones contra operadores de justicia, víctimas, testigos y defensores de derechos humanos involucrados en los procesos judiciales para el esclarecimiento de responsabilidades y lucha contra la impunidad por crímenes y atrocidades cometidos durante el período del conflicto armado.

181. La Relatora Especial se permite reiterar que, en el presente contexto, es esencial que las autoridades se pronuncien públicamente apoyando la importante labor que llevan a cabo los defensores y defensoras de derechos humanos en sociedades plurales y democráticas.

191. La Relatora Especial agradece las respuestas recibidas a dos de las cuatro comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe con detalles acerca de las medidas adoptadas respecto a algunos de los casos. Sin embargo, lamenta que, en el momento de finalizar este informe, no se había recibido respuesta a dos de las comunicaciones enviadas.

192. La Relatora Especial reitera su honda preocupación por el clima de violencia e inseguridad en el que operan los defensores en Honduras. En este sentido, la Relatora se muestra consternada por el clima de violencia, los asesinatos, ataques y hostigamiento contra defensores y defensoras que trabajan en temas relacionados con el acceso a la tierra, que a menudo afecta a comunidades campesinas e indígenas en zonas donde operan empresas energéticas o extractivas.

193. A la Relatora también la preocupa la situación de riesgo extremo a la que se enfrentan aquellos que trabajan por los derechos de las personas lesbianas, gays, bisexuales, transgénero e intersexuales (LGBTI). La Relatora Especial se muestra preocupada por la posible contrarreforma del artículo 321 del Código Penal, que tendría supuestamente por objetivo derogar la parte del artículo que pretendía acabar con la discriminación de la identidad de género y orientación sexual.

194. En conexión con lo anterior, la Relatora Especial lamenta que tanto el proyecto de ley para la protección de los y las defensoras de derechos humanos y los periodistas, como el mecanismo nacional de protección, estén aún a la espera de ser adoptados y establecidos respectivamente. La Relatora confía que se lleven a cabo las consultas necesarias para garantizar un proceso lo más participativo posible en el diseño, adopción e implementación de dicha ley y mecanismo.

195. En este contexto, la Relatora Especial se muestra preocupada por el alto grado de impunidad que prevalece respecto a las agresiones y violaciones de los derechos de los defensores y defensoras – sobre todo los siete asesinatos mencionados en las comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe – e insta al Gobierno a que tome las medidas necesarias para que estos actos sean investigados de forma pronta y adecuada, que los culpables respondan ante la justicia y que las víctimas obtengan reparación adecuada.

Observations

203. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the acknowledgement of receipt for the communication sent on 20 February 2013. She regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, no substantive responses had been transmitted to the four communications sent during the reporting period and she trusts that the Government will provide responses to these communications shortly. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the response provided to a communication sent during the previous reporting period (dated 15 February 2012).²⁸

204. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern regarding information that she has received of the alleged killing of a human rights defender and attempted killing of another defender, as mentioned in the communication dated 8 March 2013. She expresses her sincere hope that these cases will be duly investigated, that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the families of the victims that were killed will obtain adequate redress. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

208. The Special Rapporteur expresses concerns about information received on alleged restrictions on the right to freedom of peaceful assembly in Indonesia, including the arbitrary dispersal, arrests and detention of peaceful protestors and the denial of a permit to hold a demonstration. She would like to reiterate her concerns that certain provisions in the Bill on Mass Organisations will hamper the legitimate human rights work of civil society in Indonesia, in particular of foreign societal organisations, which she voiced in the joint press

2014. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the response to her communication dated 5 July 2013. However, she regrets that no responses have been received to the remaining three communications sent to the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran during the present reporting period. The Special Rapporteur notes that there are two communications left unanswered from the previous reporting period (IRN 1/2012; 24/2012).³⁰

2015. The Special Rapporteur expresses her renewed concern regarding information received at the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran's alleged use of charges including 'national security' and propaganda against the system to restrict the peaceful work of human rights defenders in the Islamic Republic of Iran. The Special Rapporteur is alarmed that overly broad interpretations of such charges may result in disproportionate and undue restrictions on the fundamental rights of human rights defenders to carry out their legitimate and peaceful activities in defence and promotion of human rights. Further, she reiterates her grave concern at the conditions in which human rights defenders are held in Iranian prisons.

However, she remains concerned that a number of lawyers and human rights defenders are currently serving lengthy sentences due to their work. She urges the Government of Iran to take immediate steps to ensure that human rights defenders are able to carry out their work in a safe and enabling environment without fear of detention, harassment and prosecution. She remains available to provide any guidance or assistance that the Government might require in this regard.

Observations

220. The Special Rapporteur regrets that at the time of the finalisation of this report, the Government had not transmitted a reply to her communication sent during the reporting period. However, she thanks the Government for its response to a communication sent in the previous reporting period (dated 29 November 2012),³³ and welcomes the decision to release Mr Ahmed Al Shami on 13 December 2012.

221. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern with regard to reports that she has received of killings of media professionals and journalists in Iraq over the past decade. The Special Rapporteur expresses further concern that the right to freedom of opinion and expression of media professionals in Iraq is severely restricted by the lack of a safe and enabling environment in which to perform their work independently and without undue interference, harassment and threats to their physical and psychological integrity. She expresses her sincere hope that these cases will be duly investigated, that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the families of the victims that were killed will obtain adequate redress. Observations

225. The Special Rapporteur regrets that at the time of the finalisation of this report, the Government had not transmitted a reply to any of her three communications sent during the reporting period. She wishes to express her concern at the reported increased restrictions to the activities of human rights defenders working in Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including raids on human rights organisations in Ramallah. She is also concerned regarding information she has received concerning arrests and arbitrary detention of human rights defenders, and allegations of torture or other cruel, inhumane or degrading treatment or punishment and the denial of access to a lawyer. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

226. The Special Rapporteur also expresses concern regarding the Government's alleged justification for these arrests, raids and seizures, including 'terrorist' or 'illegal' affiliation. She is concerned that this may be based on an overly broad definition of terrorism, leading in consequence to restrictions on human rights defenders' right to freedom of opinion and expression, and on their ability to effectively carry out their legitimate and peaceful human rights activities.

227. The Special Rapporteur expresses serious concern at the allegations of ongoing judicial harassment against Mr. Issa Amro and the intimidation directed against him and members of Youth Against Settlement (YAS), as mentioned in the communication dated 2 August 2013. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her concerns that this could be as a result of Mr. Amro's co-operation with UN bodies as expressed in the joint public statement published on 13 August 2013³⁴. Furthermore, she reminds the Government of Israel that everyone has the right to "unhindered access to and communication with international bodies".³⁵ She would like to reiterate her concern for Mr. Amro's physical and psychological integrity, given the attacks against him and the YAS centre and the seriousness of the allegations, namely that he has received a number of death threats and that he was tortured while in custody.

232. The Special Rapporteur would like to thank the Government for the three replies received to the four communications sent during the reporting period. She is concerned that, at the time of finalising this report, no reply had been received to the communication sent on 22 August 2013 on the situation of human rights lawyer, Ms. Zinaida Moukhortova, regarding allegations received indicating that she had been subject to forced psychiatric treatment. The Special Rapporteur considers the allegations very serious and trusts that a response will be provided shortly.
233. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her concern regarding the situation of Mr. Vadim Kuramshin, as mentioned in the communication dated 22 March 2013. She is concerned about his physical and psychological integrity, and the allegations received reiterating that it is directly linked to his human rights activities.

240. JAL³⁶ 15/11/2013 Case no: KEN 8/2013 State reply: none to date

Alleged legislative developments that could unduly restrict the rights to freedom of association and expression.

Observations

241. The Special Rapporteur deeply regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, no response had been transmitted to any of the six communications sent during the reporting period, particularly due to the serious allegations that were raised therein.

242. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern regarding information that she has received of alleged killings of human rights defenders and harassments and intimidation of human rights defenders and their families. She urges the Government to duly investigate these cases and ensure that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the families of the victims that were killed will obtain adequate redress. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

243. The Special Rapporteur expresses particular concern regarding information that she has received that the incidents of harassment and intimidation against human rights defenders and the killing of the human rights lawyer Mr. Peter Wanyama Wanyoni could be considered as reprisals for their cooperation with UN human rights mechanisms, in this case the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances. In this regard, she strongly urges the Government of Kenya to ensure that human rights defenders can carry out their legitimate activities in a safe and an enabling environment; this includes through safe and unhindered access to international human rights bodies such as the United Nations, its mechanisms and representatives in the field of human rights, without fear of harassment, stigmatisation or criminalisation of any kind.³⁷

244. As mentioned in the communication dated 23 September 2013, the Special Rapporteur remains concerned regarding information that she has received of alleged threats by a militia group to burn down the house of Mr. Maina Kai, Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association, and his family. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur expresses further concern regarding information that she has received of increased intimidation and harassment of human rights defenders in Kenya engaged in fighting impunity and ensuring accountability for the 2007 and 2008 post-election violence and for their involvement in cases before the International Criminal Court.

245. She also expresses her concern regarding the security and the physical and psychological integrity of human rights defenders exercising their right to associate freely and assemble peacefully, following reports that she has received of excessive use of force by police and military forces during demonstrations and the use of firearms against demonstrations, which resulted in serious injuries and the death of one of the demonstrators.

246. The Special Rapporteur is also concerned with information that she has received regarding undue restrictions on freedom of peaceful assembly and association, including a blanket ban that was imposed on all public gatherings after the release of the results of the presidential election on 24 March 2013. She is also concerned regarding the alleged amendment of the Statute Law (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill presented to Parliament on 30 October 2013, which lacks clarity and might be opened up to interpretations that would unduly limit the rights to freedom of association, opinion and expression. She would like to reiterate the concerns that she voiced in a joint press release on 3 December 2013 that the amendments to the regulations of associations contained in the draft law could have profound consequences for civil society organisations in Kenya, including for those involved in human rights work, and could deter individuals from expressing dissenting views.³⁸

248. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the response received to the communication sent during the reporting period. She regrets that, at the time of finalising this report, the translation of the response into English was not available.

249. The Special Rapporteur reiterates her interest in visiting the country and regrets that to date her request to conduct such a visit (2012) has not received an answer.

Observations

253. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government of Lao People's Democratic Republic (PDR) for the detailed responses transmitted to her communication sent 20 December 2012 and 11 October 2012. However, she regrets that no response has been received to the other communication sent during her reporting period.

254. With regards to the disappearance of Mr. Sombath Somphone, the Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern that his disappearance might be related to his legitimate work on land rights in Lao PDR. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the response from the Government of Lao PDR that the investigation is ongoing and that perpetrators will be brought to justice. She would like to reiterate the concerns that she voiced in a joint press release on 16 December 2013 that Mr. Somphone's disappearance might have a chilling effect on human rights defenders operating in the country, owing to his high profile at the national and international levels.³⁹ In this regard, she urges the Government of Lao PDR to ensure that human rights defenders are able to carry out their work in a safe and enabling environment without fear of harassment of any sort.

255. With regards to the draft Guidelines for the implementation of the Prime Minister's Decree on International Non-Governmental Organisations, the Special Rapporteur welcomes the assurance from the Government of Lao PDR in the reply on 6 December 2013 that these Guidelines are a work in progress in consultation with all development partners and stakeholders, including International NGOs working in the country.

Libya

256. JAL 09/01/2013 Case no: LBY 3/2012 State reply: none to date

Alleged lack of compliance of new law on peaceful assembly with international standards related to freedom of peaceful assembly and to freedom of opinion and expression.

Observations

257. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her communication sent during the reporting period. In this connection, the Special Rapporteur expresses concern at the passing of Law no. 65/2012, which aims at regulating peaceful assembly in Libya. Several of the articles contained within the legislation do not comply with international human rights standards. For instance, article 4 reportedly provides for the establishment of a committee of organisers responsible for maintaining public order. Further, article 6 (a) reportedly gives the authorities the power to change the time and place of an assembly, which may prevent individuals from delivering their message to their target audience.

258. The Special Rapporteur calls on the Government of Libya to ensure a safe and conducive environment for human rights defenders in compliance with the Declaration on Human Rights Defenders, where their psychological and physical integrity is ensured, and where they do not face acts of harassment and intimidation.

Observations

261. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the reply transmitted to one of the two communications sent during the reporting period but regrets that, at the time of finalising this report, no response had been received to the communication sent on 5 July 2013. Concerning attacks and harassment of LGBTI defenders, the Special Rapporteur takes note that an investigation is underway and looks forward to receiving additional information on the allegation in the communication sent on 17 May 2013.

³⁹ "A year on, the enforced disappearance of Sombath Somphone continues with impunity in Lao PDR" (16/12/2013): <http://www.ohchr.org/EN/NewsEvents/Pages/DisplayNews.aspx?NewsID=14103&LangID=E>

262. Given the nature and profile of the allegations received during the reporting period, the Special Rapporteur would like to express her concern regarding the physical and psychological integrity of those working and advocating for the rights of LGBTI people and working to promote equality and non-discrimination, particularly in exercising their right to freedom of opinion and expression and of peaceful assembly.

Observations

271. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the acknowledgement of receipt for the communication sent on 16 August 2013. She regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, no substantive response had been transmitted to the seven communications sent during the reporting period. The Special Rapporteur also notes that this is a significantly less favourable record compared to the substantive responses received to six of the seven communications sent during the previous reporting period.⁴¹

272. The Special Rapporteur expresses her concern regarding reports that she has received of harassment and undue investigations and arrests of staff and secretariat members of NGOs under section 9 of the Peaceful Assembly Act 2012 (“Notification of Assembly”), the Sedition Act 1948 and the Film Censorship Act 2002.

273. The Special Rapporteur also expresses her concern regarding incidents of excessive use of force against demonstrators and arrest of human rights defenders for organising peaceful demonstrations and rallies under the Peaceful Assembly Act.

274. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her request to visit Malaysia (2010) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

The Special Rapporteur expresses her concern regarding the reports received of harassment and threats against the staff of NGOs. She is also concerned with regards to the investigation into NGOs and the threats of dissolving them. The Special Rapporteur urges the Government to take the necessary measures to ensure that an environment exists in which human rights defenders are able to carry out their activities without fear of persecution or restriction of any sort.

Observaciones

282. La Relatora Especial agradece al Gobierno las respuestas recibidas a dos de las cinco comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe, así como por la información proporcionada acerca de las medidas de protección adoptadas para garantizar la integridad física de los defensores y defensoras de derechos humanos. Sin embargo, la Relatora lamenta que, en el momento de finalizar este informe, no se había recibido respuesta a tres de las comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe ni tampoco a las seis comunicaciones del periodo anterior que no obtuvieron respuesta en su momento.⁴²

283. La Relatora reitera su profunda preocupación sobre las alegaciones recibidas indicando la persistencia de un clima de violencia e inseguridad para los defensores y defensoras en México. En particular, la Relatora Especial se muestra seriamente preocupada por la situación de riesgo que afecta a los defensores que trabajan por el derecho al acceso a la tierra y recursos naturales a menudo en el contexto de comunidades indígenas y campesinas afectadas por las operaciones de industrias del sector energético y extractivo; a los que trabajan por los derechos de los migrantes; a las defensoras y los defensores que trabajan por los derechos de las mujeres, y a los que trabajan contra la impunidad.

284. La gravedad de los casos que han llegado a la Relatora es una muestra de una situación de inseguridad extrema para los defensores y defensoras en México. En este contexto, la Relatora nota con preocupación las alegaciones recibidas acerca de la involucración de agentes estatales en actos de violencia y malos tratos contra defensores.

285. En este contexto, la Relatora considera preocupante la información recibida sobre el incumplimiento de algunas de las medidas cautelares otorgadas por la Comisión Interamericana de Derechos Humanos a defensores y defensoras. Además, la Relatora quisiera señalar que algunos de los casos enviados durante el periodo del presente informe eran beneficiarios de protección por parte del Mecanismo Nacional de Protección lo que considera información preocupante ya que, a su juicio, mostraría que existen ciertas deficiencias en la implementación de dicho mecanismo.

286. La Relatora Especial quisiera de nuevo llamar la atención acerca del alto nivel de impunidad que prevalece en torno a las violaciones cometidas con los y las defensoras en el país. Le gustaría destacar la importancia de que se lleven a cabo investigaciones prontas, eficaces e imparciales sobre violaciones cometidas contra de defensores y defensoras, que los responsables sean traducidos en justicia y que las víctimas reciban una reparación adecuada. La lucha contra la impunidad es esencial para combatir y prevenir las violaciones de los derechos de los y las defensoras.

287. La Relatora Especial reitera su disponibilidad a ofrecer asistencia al Gobierno y confía en que su solicitud de visitar el país (2011) sea considerada favorablemente.

Observations

290. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the responses to all three communications sent during the present reporting period.

However, the Special Rapporteur expresses concern at the hostile environment in which human rights defenders promoting the rights of the LGBTI community operate in the Republic of Moldova. In this connection, she would like to reiterate her concerns in the communication dated 29 July 2013 regarding the adoption on 23 May 2013 of Law no. 117 to amend the Contravention Code no. 218-XVI of 29 October 2008. Specifically, the amendment to article 90 on public activity with a negative impact on minors now stipulates that the distribution of public information (with or without criminal intent) on “relations other than those of the family and marriage as specified in the Family Code” will entail sanctions. The Special Rapporteur acknowledges the Ministry of Interior’s Implementation Instruction for article 90, dated 26 July 2013, and expresses her sincere hope that authorities will adopt the necessary measures to ensure that defenders working for the rights of the LGBTI community can work in a safe and enabling environment without fear of violence or harassment of any sort.

Observations

302. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government of Myanmar for the detailed responses provided to seven of the 11 communications sent during the reporting period. However, the Special Rapporteur regrets that no reply has been received from the Government to any of the four other communications sent during the reporting period, particularly due to the grave concerns that were raised therein.

303. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the recent steps by the President of Myanmar's in October and December 2013 of releasing 100 prisoners of conscience in Myanmar. However, despite these positive developments in the country, she would like to reiterate her grave concerns regarding information that she has received of continued arbitrary arrest and detention of human rights defenders, including allegations of torture and ill-treatment while in detention and refusal of access to lawyers. In this context, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate the concerns that have previously been expressed by the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Myanmar, Mr. Tomás Ojea Quintana, regarding reports received of torture being routinely used by police officers with the aim of extracting confessions. In this regard, she would like to reiterate the need to combat the culture of impunity that exists for acts of torture in police stations, prisons and in other places of detention, particularly during the interrogation of suspects. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

304. The Special Rapporteur would like to further express her concern regarding reports of excessive use of force by law enforcement officials during peaceful protests, and in particular cases of severe injuries and killings of protesters. In this regard, she would like to encourage the Government of Myanmar to take all necessary measures to protect defenders during protests and to refrain from the use of excessive force against protesters. The Special Rapporteur recommends the Government to enforce a code of conduct on law enforcement officials, particularly with regard to crowd control and the use of force. She further recommends the Government to ensure that the legal framework contains effective provisions for the oversight and accountability of law enforcement officials.

305. The Special Rapporteur further expresses her concern regarding provisions which curtail the right to freedom of peaceful assembly in the Decree on the Right to Peaceful Assembly and Peaceful Procession adopted on 5 July 2012. The Special Rapporteur is available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Allegations of violent dispersal by law enforcement authorities of peaceful demonstrations organised by Kamlari activists in Nepal.

Observations

309. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, no response had been transmitted to any of the three communications sent during the reporting period.

310. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern of violent dispersal and arrests of protesters during a peaceful sit-in protest by police forces, including sexual assaults of female protesters.

311. The Special Rapporteur is also concerned about reports received of threats and stigmatising remarks against human rights defenders in the media. She is particularly concerned with allegations of calls for “people’s action”, which have led to violent physical attacks of these defenders. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

312. The Special Rapporteur also expresses her concern regarding reports of undue delays in the procedure to renew the registration of a NGO working to promote respect for the rights of LGBT persons. She further expresses her concern regarding arbitrary arrests, harassment, intimidation by the police and ill-treatment in detention of its members.

313. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time of finalising this report, no reply has been received in response to her multiple requests for a country visit to Nepal (2008, 2009, 2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observations

316. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government of Nigeria for its response to the communication sent on 17 April 2013, but she regrets that no response was received to the communication sent 13 June 2013.

317. The Special Rapporteur expresses her concern regarding reports received of arrests, detention and harassment of human rights defenders in Nigeria. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

318. The Special Rapporteur deeply regrets the passing of the Same Sex Marriage Prohibition Act by President in January 2014. She would like to reiterate her concerns that this legislation unduly limits the free exercise of the rights to freedom of association, assembly and opinion and expression, which are not only basic rights but essential to claim other rights. Furthermore, she is concerned that this legislation might prevent human rights defenders and activists defending the human rights of LGBT persons and those working to prevent transmission of HIV, to peacefully advocate for dissenting views and exercise their legitimate rights.

The Special Rapporteur welcomes the confirmation in the reply by the Government that the eleven human rights defenders would be liberated on 22 March 2013.

323. The Special Rapporteur regrets that to date no reply has been received in response to her request to visit Oman (2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide any technical assistance the Government might require.

Moreover, the Special Rapporteur acknowledges the receipt on 27 March 2013 of the state response to a communication sent in the previous reporting period (PAK 11/2012),⁴⁴ and she welcomes the action taken to investigate the serious attack on Ms Malala Yousafzai, and to support her family in medical treatment.

330. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern for the physical and psychological integrity of human rights defenders and their family members in Pakistan following reports that she has received of violence, torture, attempted killings and killings of human rights defenders. She is also concerned regarding information received of killings of family members of human rights defenders and death threats directed towards them. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

Observations

343. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, no response had been transmitted to the two communications sent during the reporting period.

344. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern regarding an extremely violent and increasingly dangerous environment for human rights defenders to conduct their peaceful work in the Philippines. She is particularly concerned regarding reports that she has received of brutal killings, including killings of relatives and children of human rights defenders, torture, ill-treatment in detention, arrests, threats, harassment and forced displacement of environmental and indigenous rights defenders. She also expresses grave concern of alleged killings of journalists for having reported on corruption. She expresses her sincere hope that all of these cases will be duly investigated, that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the families of the victims that were killed will obtain adequate redress. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

345. The Special Rapporteur regrets that to date no reply has been received in response to her request to visit the Philippines (2008, 2010, 2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her

352. The Special Rapporteur conducted a country visit to the Republic of Korea during the reporting period and would like to thank the Government for accepting her request to visit the country and for the excellent cooperation throughout the process.

353. In the report about her visit,⁴⁷ the Special Rapporteur highlights that human rights defenders are generally able to carry out their work freely but she observes that the environment in which they operate is quite polarised and not always sufficiently conducive to the defence and promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms. This seems to stem from the lack of trust between defenders and authorities, and from important shortcomings in the legal framework including the framework governing the exercise of basic freedoms, such as the rights to freedoms of opinion and expression, of peaceful assembly and of association. She underlines that legislation pertaining to national security, and the complex geopolitical situation in the Korean peninsula, also have a restrictive impact on the environment in which defenders operate.

354. The Special Rapporteur believes that, for effective dialogue to take place, authorities, defenders and other stakeholders need to engage constructively with each other, exercise diplomacy and patience to communicate their positions and listen to each other's arguments.

Observations

361. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the replies transmitted to five of her six communications sent during the reporting period. She regrets that, at the time of finalising this report, no response had been received to her communication sent on 13 June 2013.

362. The Special Rapporteur is particularly concerned about the use of the legal and administrative framework to restrict the space in which human rights defenders operate, including by unduly curtailing basic rights and fundamental freedoms such as the rights to freedom of opinion and expression, association and peaceful assembly.

363. During the reporting period, the Special Rapporteur has reiterated her concern about the implementation of the Law on Introducing Amendments to Certain Legislative Acts Regarding the Regulation of Activities of Non-commercial Organisations Performing the Functions of Foreign agents (No. 7-FZ). According to the text, any non-commercial organisation carrying out political activity and receiving funding from sources outside the Russian Federation must register as a "foreign agent". The Special Rapporteur has warned in a public statement issued on 14 May 2013, jointly with the Special Rapporteurs on freedom of opinion and expression and freedom of association and peaceful assembly,⁴⁸ about the “obstructive, intimidating and stigmatising” effects that the application of this law is having on human rights defenders and organisations.

364. Moreover, the Special Rapporteur is seriously concerned about the use of this law to target and intimidate human rights organisations, which have engaged with the UN, its mechanisms and representatives in the field of human rights. She is concerned about the acts of reprisals against the NGOs Public Verdict Foundation and Anti-Discrimination Centre Memorial for having provided information to the UN Committee against Torture in the context of the examination of the Russian Federation by the Committee in November 2012. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur strongly urges the Government to ensure that human rights defenders can carry out their legitimate activities in a safe and an enabling environment; this includes through safe and unhindered access to international human rights bodies such as the United Nations, its mechanisms and representatives in the field of human rights, without fear of harassment, stigmatisation or criminalisation of any kind.⁴⁹ The case of these NGOs was the subject of the communication by the Special Rapporteur and other independent experts dated 13 June 2013. The Committee Against Torture has also raised these cases with the Government⁵⁰ and issued two public statements regarding reprisals, on 6 June 2013⁵¹ and another one on 23 December 2013⁵².

365. Moreover, the Special Rapporteur wishes to express her serious concern about the legislative amendments to Federal Laws regarding “propaganda of homosexuality among minors”, non-commercial organisations, and also expresses concern at the implementation of Federal Act No. 54-FZ (19 June 2004). Together with other UN independent experts, she has publically warned that this legislation could be used to unduly restrict the activities of those advocating for the rights of LGBT individuals and “could further contribute to the already difficult environment in which these defenders operate, stigmatising their work and making them the target of acts of intimidation and violence”.⁵³

366. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her availability to provide guidance and support to the Government of the Russian Federation in any issue related to the establishment and consolidation of a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders, including through a conducive legal, institutional and administrative framework. She reiterates her interest in visiting the country since 2011, at a time convenient for the mandate and the authorities.

Observations

374. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, the Government had not responded to any of her five communications sent during the present reporting period. She considers the allegations very serious as they refer to undue restrictions on a number of basic rights and freedoms which are fundamental to the activities of human rights defenders, and trusts that a substantive response will be provided shortly. However, the Special Rapporteur welcomes the state's responses to two communications sent in the previous reporting period (dated 3 May 2012 and 25 May 2012).⁵⁶

375. Particular concern is expressed regarding reports of arbitrary arrests and detention of peaceful protesters, including their children. The Special Rapporteur is also concerned regarding information of imposed travel bans, judicial harassment, unfair trials and the sentencing of human rights defenders on charges relating to "terrorism" and involvement with "illegal organisations". Furthermore, she is disturbed by reports that she has received of ill-treatment and torture of human rights defenders while in detention or serving prison sentences. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

376. The Special Rapporteur is particularly concerned that human rights defenders in Saudi Arabia are being targeted and are facing lengthy prison sentences including for engaging with United Nations human rights mechanisms, and wishes to reiterate the right of everyone to “unhindered access to and communication with international bodies”.⁵⁷ The Special Rapporteur is also very concerned by the court-ordered disbanding of the Saudi Arabia Civil and Political Rights Association (ACPRA), as mentioned in the communication dated 27 March 2013, involving the confiscation of its property and the closure of its social media accounts.

377. The Special Rapporteur regrets that to date no reply has been received in response to her request for a country visit to Saudi Arabia (2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

She expresses her sincere hope that these cases will be duly investigated, that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the families of the victims that were killed will obtain adequate redress. 404. The Special Rapporteur is extremely concerned by the reports received of excessive and disproportionate use of force by national security forces during a number of demonstrations in September and October 2013, as mentioned in the communication dated 17 October 2013. This led to the deaths of an estimated 200 demonstrators by gunshot wounds, including children and individuals filming the demonstrations, as well as the arrest of an estimated 800 demonstrators. She expresses her sincere hope that these cases will be duly investigated, that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the families of the victims that were killed will obtain adequate redress. 406. The Special Rapporteur also expresses her concerns regarding the amendment of Sudan's Armed Forces Law of 2007 which subjects civilians to the jurisdiction of military courts and the creation of new offences such as "undermining the constitutional system" and "publication of false news". Alleged enforced disappearance, torture, incommunicado detention and denial of medical treatment.

412. JUA 28/06/2013 Case no: SYR 3/2013 State reply: none to date

Alleged acts of reprisal, incommunicado detention and torture and ill-treatment of human rights defenders for their cooperation with the United Nations, its representatives and mechanisms in the field of human rights.

Observations

413. The Special Rapporteur regrets that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, the Government had not responded to any of the three communications sent during the present reporting period. She considers the allegations very serious as they refer to grave violations of a number of human rights and she trusts that a substantive response will be provided shortly. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the response to her communication sent during the previous reporting period regarding allegations of killings, torture arrests and incommunicado detention of human rights defenders (dated 2 November 2012)⁶². She takes note of the information that Mr. Maher Fawzi al-Hamoud was released on 7 November 2012. However, she remains gravely concerned regarding the situation of the other individuals that were listed in this communication.

414. The Special Rapporteur is gravely concerned for the physical and psychological integrity of human rights defenders in the Syrian Arab Republic, particularly in light of the numerous reports received of enforced disappearances, incommunicado detention, ill-treatment, torture and killings of human rights defenders. She expresses her sincere hope that these cases will be duly investigated, that perpetrators will be brought to justice and that the families of the victims that were killed will obtain adequate redress. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

415. The Special Rapporteur expresses particular concern that some of the cases of incommunicado detention, ill-treatment and torture of human rights defenders could be considered as reprisals for their cooperation with UN human rights mechanisms. In this regard, she strongly urges the Government to ensure that human rights defenders can carry out their legitimate activities in a safe and an enabling environment; this includes through open and unhindered access to international human rights bodies such as the United Nations, its mechanisms and representatives in the field of human rights, without fear of harassment, stigmatisation or criminalisation of any kind.⁶³

416. The Special Rapporteur regrets that to date no reply has been received in response to her requests to visit the Syrian Arab Republic (2008, 2010) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observations

421. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the detailed responses received from the Royal Thai Government to all of the four communications issued during the reporting period. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the Royal Thai Government's assurance that it is committed to the protection and promotion of all human rights defenders in Thailand. Following reports of killings and allegations of threats against human rights defenders, the Special Rapporteur would like to express her concern regarding the physical and psychological integrity of human rights defenders in Thailand. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

422. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her requests to visit Thailand (2010, 2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observations

424. La Rapporteuse spéciale remercie le Gouvernement de la Tunisie des informations fournies dans la réponse à sa communication envoyée pendant la période couverte par le présent rapport. Elle prend note du fait que l'enquête sur le meurtre de M. Mohamed Lotfi Nagedh est toujours en cours et espère recevoir plus de détails dès qu'ils seront mis à disposition. La Rapporteuse spéciale veut souligner que les allégations reçues sont très sérieuses et qu'elle veut croire que des enquêtes seront dûment menées, que les auteurs seront traduits en justice et que la famille de la victime obtiendra une réparation adéquate.

Alleged attacks against the independence of the legal profession, in particular alleged the arrest, detention and launching of criminal proceedings against lawyers in the context of antiterrorism operations.

Observations

428. The Special Rapporteur would like to thank the Government for the replies received to two of the three communications sent during the reporting period. She nevertheless regrets that, at the time of finalising this report, no response had been received to her communication dated 14 August 2013.

429. The Special Rapporteur takes note of the detailed response received concerning the protest that took place around Istanbul's Gezi Park in May 2013 and the police intervention in connection to the mentioned protest. She nevertheless would like to underline that the right to protest is an essential element in any democratic dispensation and restrictions imposed on this right should be closely scrutinised with respect to their necessity and proportionality. States have a positive duty to protect assemblies that are peaceful, and assemblies that are threatened with violence should be assured protection and not prohibited or dissolved. Mindful that assemblies can be a source of disruption of daily routines, the Special Rapporteur believes that authorities should try to balance the competing needs of the different users of public space rather than restricting the rights of those participating in public demonstrations.⁶⁴

⁶⁴ A/61/312, paras 53-56 and 81

430. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned about attacks against the independence of the legal profession, in particular alleged arrests, detention and launching of criminal proceedings against lawyers in the context of antiterrorism operations linked to the contacts they had with their clients within the scope of their professional duties and the legitimate exercise of their profession. These concerns were expressed in her communication dated 14 August 2013 as well as in previous urgent appeals in 2011 and 2012 (TUR 6/2011;1/2012).⁶⁵

431. The Special Rapporteur would like to thank the Government for responding favourably to her request to visit the country (2012) and reiterates her hope that authorities will provide the mandate with sufficient time for the visit in order to allow it to adequately assess the situation of defenders.

Uganda

433. JAL 21/02/2013 Case no: UGA 6/2012 State reply: none to date

Allegations that the draft “anti-homosexuality legislation” in Uganda would criminalise “any form of homosexual” act or “attempt to commit a homosexual act, including consensual sex between same-sex individuals”.

Observations

434. The Special Rapporteur wishes to express her regret that, at the time of the finalisation of this report, the Government had not responded to the communication she sent during the reporting period.

435. The Special Rapporteur deeply regrets the signing of the Anti-Homosexuality Act on 24 February 2014. She is concerned that this Act will prevent human rights defenders and activists defending the human rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) persons, to peacefully advocate for dissenting views and exercise their legitimate rights. She also fears that the Act might trigger attacks against and have an intimidating effect on individuals and associations working on issues related to the rights of LGBT persons, including among others those who advocate for human rights for all without discrimination, those who work on preventing the transmission of HIV and those who provide psychosocial support to LGBT people.

Alleged forced psychiatric treatment and confinement of human rights defender.

Observations

438. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the responses to the two communications sent during the reporting period.

439. The Special Rapporteur is particularly concerned by the alleged forced psychiatric treatment and confinement of Ms. Raisa Radchenko without a document confirming a court order, as mentioned in the communication dated 22 July 2013. Further concern is expressed at the treatment of Ms. Radchenko's family and the information received alleging that the court order to treat and confine Ms. Radchenko may have been issued on the basis of alleged anti-social behaviour, reportedly related to her peaceful and legitimate human rights work.

440. The Special Rapporteur is concerned by the threats to and harassment of LGBT rights defenders in Ukraine, as mentioned in the communication dated 21 December 2012, and reiterates her concerns about the treatment of LGBT community under Draft Law 8711. This legislation criminalises any reference to homosexuality in the media and public domain and makes "promoting homosexuality" an administrative offence, punishable by a fine. Draft Law 8711 also includes homosexuality within a list of offences that "propagandise violence and cruelty", which carries a prison sentence up to five years. In this connection, the Special Rapporteur expresses serious concern over the attack of protestors in the presence of police officers at a LGBT demonstration on 8 December 2012 in Kyiv. She is very concerned about the court order from the Kyiv District Administrative Court banning the protest, and regrets that the legal grounds for this court order were not divulged in the Government's response dated 18 March 2013.

441. Regarding the recent wave of political protests and unrest in the country, the Special Rapporteur would like to echo the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in expressing her concern about clashes and violence during demonstrations,⁶⁶ which have caused a number of casualties and left many injured, including journalists monitoring and reporting about the demonstrations. She trusts that constructive dialogue and restraint will be used by State security forces and all parties involved in order to avoid further escalation of unrest.

Alleged implementation of the new law on Cyber Crime as well as alleged torture of detainees.

Observations

448. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the responses of the Government of United Arab Emirates to two of the five communications issued within the present reporting period, as well as the response to the communication from the previous reporting period (dated 7 November 2012).⁶⁸ She considers all of the allegations very serious as they refer to undue restrictions on a number of rights and freedoms which are fundamental to the activities of human rights defenders, and trusts that a substantive response will be provided shortly to the remaining three communications from this reporting period.

449. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate profound concern about the situation of human rights defenders in the United Arab Emirates, particularly due to reports received that indicate a pattern of harassment, arbitrary detention, enforced disappearances and prison sentences targeting human rights defenders legitimately exercising their right to freedom of expression and freedom of association. She remains concerned regarding reports that she has received of torture and violations of minimum fair trial standards.

450. The Special Rapporteur would also like to reiterate her concerns regarding the amendments to the 2006 Law on Cybercrime and the use of this law to silence critical voices calling for basic rights and freedoms and democracy in the United Arab Emirates.

451. The Special Rapporteur also expresses grave concern at the physical attack and acts of intimidation against a human rights defender following a statement that he made by video during the 21st Session of the Human Rights Council. In this regard, she strongly urges the government of United Arab Emirates to ensure that human rights defenders can carry out their legitimate activities in a safe and an enabling environment; this includes through open and unhindered access to international human rights bodies such as the United Nations, its mechanisms and representatives in the field of human rights, without fear of harassment, stigmatisation or criminalisation of any kind.⁶⁹

452. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her request to visit the United Arab Emirates (2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Moreover, she did not receive a response to the communication sent during the previous reporting period (USA 24/2011).⁷⁰ She considers the allegations addressed therein as very serious and trusts that a response will be provided shortly.

Observations

458. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the response provided to one of the two communications sent during the reporting period but regrets that, at the time of finalising this report, the translation into English was not available. She trusts she will receive a response to the remaining communication, given the seriousness of the allegations presented.

459. The Special Rapporteur is very concerned about credible reports and information received regarding the continuous harassment, detention, and prosecution of human rights defenders in connection to their work, including journalists. Defenders are routinely monitored by security officers, questioned, placed under house arrest or prevented from taking part in peaceful demonstrations.

460. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her availability to provide guidance and support to the Government in any issue related to the establishment and consolidation of a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders, including through the establishment of a conducive legal, institutional and administrative framework.

Observaciones

464. La Relatora Especial lamenta que, en el momento de finalizar el presente informe, no se había obtenido respuesta a las tres comunicaciones enviadas durante el periodo del presente informe. Asimismo, toma nota de la falta de respuesta a las cuatro comunicaciones que no obtuvieron respuesta durante el periodo anterior.⁷¹ La Relatora considera que las alegaciones recibidas son muy serias y confía en que serán debidamente investigadas, los culpables llevados ante la justicia y las víctimas recibirán reparación adecuada.

465. La Relatora se muestra preocupada por las recientes modificaciones hechas al Código Penal Venezolano las cuales afectarían negativamente a los defensores y defensoras de derechos humanos que trabajan por los derechos de las víctimas de violaciones conectadas con la conducta de funcionarios públicos y las fuerzas del orden.

466. En este contexto, la Relatora Especial hace eco de las declaraciones de la Alta Comisionada de las Naciones Unidas para los Derechos Humanos y la Comisión Interamericana de Derechos Humanos y querría expresar su profundo pesar por la entrada en vigor de la denuncia de la Convención Americana sobre Derechos Humanos respecto del Estado venezolano el 10 de septiembre de 2013. Le preocupa el impacto que dicha denuncia tendrá sobre la situación de las víctimas de violaciones de derechos humanos ocurridas después de esa fecha y los que trabajan por sus derechos y contra la impunidad, ya que dichas violaciones no podrán ser conocidas por la Corte Interamericana de Derechos Humanos. Esta decisión representa un retroceso lamentable en la universalización de la protección y promoción de los derechos humanos y las libertades fundamentales y contraviene resoluciones adoptadas por el Consejo de Derechos Humanos de la ONU sobre cooperación entre mecanismos regionales e internacionales por lo que la Relatora invita al Estado a reconsiderarla.⁷²

467. La Relatora Especial reitera que confía en que el Gobierno responderá favorablemente a su solicitud de visita hecha en 2010 para valorar objetivamente la situación de los y las defensoras de derechos humanos en el país.

Observations

476. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the responses to seven of the eight communications that were sent during the reporting period and she looks forward to receiving responses to the remaining communication. Nonetheless, she remains concerned for the physical and psychological integrity of human rights defenders in Viet Nam. The Special Rapporteur expresses particular concern over the allegations of torture and ill-treatment of human rights defenders and denial of medical treatment whilst in detention. She is also concerned regarding reports of violations of the right to fair trial.

477. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned by reports received of peaceful human rights defenders and pro-democracy activists being convicted and sentenced on charges of “carrying out activities aimed at overthrowing the people’s administration” under Section 79 of the Penal Code. She also expresses concern at the sentencing of musicians with the verdict of “Conducting propaganda against the Socialist Republic of Viet Nam” for publishing songs online about social and human rights issues. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate her concerns regarding what she views as a pattern of targeting, intimidating and silencing peaceful pro-democracy activists and human rights defenders who exercise their right to freedom of opinion and expression and their right to freedom of association in the country. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that the State has a duty to protect and to provide a safe and enabling environment for human rights defenders to conduct their work.

478. The Special Rapporteur also wishes to reiterate her concern regarding the adoption of the Decree on the Management, Provision, Use of Internet Services and Information Content Online (No. 72/2013/ND-CP) (‘Decree 72’) and she encourages the Government to ensure that Decree 72 does not restrict the peaceful work of human rights defenders in Viet Nam.

479. The Special Rapporteur regrets that to date no reply has been received in response to her request to visit Viet Nam (2012) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Alleged undue interference with the work and organizational structure of civil society organizations

Observations

482. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the response from the Zambian Government to her communication dated 14 May 2013 and its assurances that consultations are being undertaken and that a response will be provided as soon as all information has been collated. She trusts that a substantive response will be provided shortly to the concerns raised therein regarding allegations of harassment of the LGBTI community and in particular those working peacefully to ensure the basic rights of LGBTI individuals.. The Special Rapporteur regrets that she has not received a response to the other communication sent during the reporting period.

483. The Special Rapporteur remains concerned that the Non-Governmental Organisation Bill may be used to unduly interfere with the substantive work and organisational structure of civil society organisations and that the unclear provisions and severe criminal sanctions within the Bill may deter human rights defenders from exercising their fundamental right to freedom of association. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur calls on the Government to ensure that human rights defenders can conduct their peaceful and legitimate work in Zambia without fear of harassment, stigmatisation or criminalisation of any sort.

Alleged excessive use of force by police and arbitrary arrest of individuals exercising their right to freedom of peaceful assembly.

Observations

487. The Special Rapporteur welcomes the response from the Government of Zimbabwe to the communication dated 21 March 2013. She takes note of the acknowledgement of receipt to the communication dated 8 October 2013 and trusts that a substantive communication will be provided shortly. She regrets that she has not received a response to the third communication sent during the reporting period.

489. The Special Rapporteur expresses grave concern that repeated searches of human rights organisations may form part of a campaign of harassment aimed at targeting and silencing civil society actors that has continued since the previous reporting period. Furthermore, she remains concerned at the situation of human rights lawyers in Zimbabwe, such as Ms. Beatrice Mtetwa, who has been the subject of three communications since 2004, including the communication dated 21 March 2013 (ZWE 16/2004; 6/2007; 2/2013). Ms. Mtetwa has reportedly been harassed by Zimbabwean police for carrying out her duties as a human rights lawyer. In this regard, the Special Rapporteur urges the Government of Zimbabwe to ensure the protection of human rights defenders and to provide a safe and enabling environment for them to conduct their work.

490. The Special Rapporteur would like to reiterate that human rights defenders “must be protected by the Government and attempts to stifle criticism must end”⁷³ as expressed in a the press statement dated 27 February 2013, which was issued jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the right to peaceful assembly and of association and the Special Rapporteur on the right to freedom of opinion and expression. She expresses grave concern that the allegations of attacks against civil society actors have coincided with participatory democratic processes, such as upcoming elections and the constitutional referendum. She is particularly concerned about allegations of excessive use of force by law enforcement officials during peaceful demonstrations and the arbitrary arrest of protesters.

491. The Special Rapporteur regrets that so far no reply has been received in response to her multiple requests to visit Zimbabwe (2008, 2010, 2011) to enable her to gain a better understanding of the situation of human rights defenders in the country. She expresses her hope that the Government will respond favourably to this request and she remains available to provide guidance and assistance the Government might require.

Observations

493. The Special Rapporteur thanks the Government for the response received to the communication sent during the reporting period. She takes note of the fact the Government shares the concerns expressed in this allegations letter and that it condemned the incident when it happened. She is reassured by the information provided indicating that the corresponding investigation is underway and victims have been offered support and protection.
