SOGIE-based human rights violations usually begin in the family home. Family members often use coercive means to "correct" or punish non-normative SOGIE.

As a result, many leave their homes to escape violence.

The stigmatization and exclusion of LGBTQ people is reinforced and reproduced in the rental housing market.

Wrongful confinement

Corrective therapy

Physical and sexual violence

As a result, many leave their homes to escape violence.

People are often evicted because of their SOGIE

LGBTQ people are often evicted

When they are able to get a house on rent, LGBTQ people face different kinds of discrimination

Face a constant risk of eviction

Face physical and sexual violence because of their SOGIE

They often have to pay a much higher rent than others

Right to non-discrimination

Availability, accessibility, and habitability of housing

Affordability of housing

Security of tenure of housing

Liberty and security of person

Right against torture, cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment

Highest attainable standard of health